LDS Church prepares for conference

NewsNet Services

For The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, these are good times indeed.

In the past two months, the church has enjoyed unprecedented media coverage — in quantity and accolades — and become the fifth-largest denomination in the United States.

Now, in the afterglow of the Winter Olympics, when the Salt Lake Temple was featured nightly on NBC and most media portrayed the church positively, the Church of Jesus Christ will host the 172nd Annual General Conference this weekend at the Conference Center.

Church leaders, including the First Presidency and members of the Quorum of the Twelve, will speak during five two-hour sessions: general sessions Saturday and Sunday at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m.; and a priesthood session Saturday at 6 p.m.

The general sessions will be broadcast live on KSL-TV (Channel 5) and KBYU (Channel 11), and will be shown in satellite-equipped church meetinghouses.

The general sessions can be heard live in 30 languages via the Internet at www.lds.org. The church's Web site will broadcast the English and Spanish video feeds.

Additionally, NewsNet will Webcast the general sessions in English and Spanish at http://newsnet.byu.edu.

NewsNet's Web site will be updated throughout Saturday and Sunday, with video clips and written summaries of conference talks.

West Bank troubles embroil world

Jerusalem Center remains safe amid conflict

Since the most recent breakdown of talks between Israelis and Palestinians, the staff of the BYU Jerusalem Center is one of the few parties whose relationship with the two groups have not been damaged.

Despite the fighting, a former center director said BYU is not in danger of losing the center.

"We have been able to maintain a good reputation with both sides," said Victor Ludlow, professor of ancient scripture and coordinator for near eastern studies.

Ludlow said BYU is using the property on a 49-year lease from the Israeli government, but the location is a Palestinian neighborhood in East Jerusalem.

Maps of a proposed Palestinian state show the Jerusalem center would end up in the newly formed Palestine.

"That wouldn't bother us at all," Ludlow said.

Students have not visited the center since November 2000 when suicide bombings began and fighting broke out.

According to University Communications, the staff at the center is staying put despite U.S. State Department warnings to Americans in Israel.

One of the last students to attend the center, senior Jamon Clark, said the center's neighbors call it the "BYU-Mormon center" and that local shopkeepers display pictures of President Gordon B. Hinckley.

"When I was over there, I felt perfectly safe and welcome," said Clark, 23, a student from New Jersey majoring in business management.

"They allowed us in their homes and completely trusted us," Clark said. "I have not met a nicer people."

Ludlow said the center will not reopen to students until a cease-fire is reached and leaders of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints give approval.

Bush sends Powell to deliver stern message to Israel, Palestinians

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In a new push for peace, President Bush on Thursday demanded that Israel pull back its troops from Palestinian cities it occupied in recent days and called on Arab nations to do more to crack down on terrorists. He ordered Secretary of State Colin Powell to the region to carry the message.

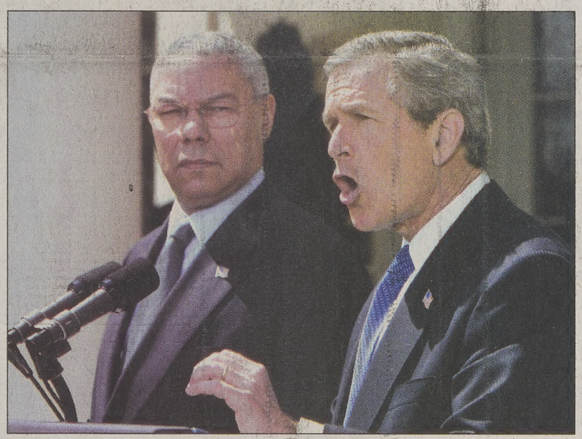
"The storms of violence cannot go on," Bush said. "Enough is enough."

In a Rose Garden speech with Powell at his side, Bush chastised Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat — "The situation in which he finds himself today is largely of his own making" — and warned Syria and Iran against fomenting more violence.

"To those who would try to use the current crisis as an opportunity to widen the conflict: Stay out," Bush said. He did not mention Iraq, though senior advisers said Bush believes Saddam Hussein is supporting suicide bombers attacking Israel.

His call for an Israeli retreat was a sudden shift in Bush's rhetoric, which has been hard to pin down in the rush of events. Just five days ago, he defended Israel's storming of Arafat's compound, saying, "I can understand why the Israeli government takes the actions they take." At the same time, his administration backed a U.N. resolution calling on Israel to withdraw its troops.

The president has faced mounting criticism with each new suicide bombing against Israelis and every military response from Israel. He has been accused of doing too much and, by other critics, too little.



Chuck Kennedy/KRT

President Bush announced Thursday, April 4, the he will send Secretary of State Colin Powell to the Middle East to help peace efforts.

Marwan Kanafani, an adviser to Arafat, welcomed the Powell mission but expressed skepticism about Bush's motives.

"It was the maximum that we could expect from the United States president at this time, with all the commitments and alignments with the Israelis," he said in a telephone interview from Gaza. "I'm realistic. I don't expect him to come and say the Palestinians are right and the Israelis are wrong. He went as far as he could, and this is something we appreciate."

There was no immediate reaction from Israel, though Prime Minister Ariel Sharon agreed to permit a U.S. envoy to meet with besieged Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat. The move raised the promise of diplomatic activity and perhaps a Powell-Arafat meeting next week.

Bush's announcement got a quick endorsement from Sen. Joseph R. Biden, Jr., D-Del., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

"President Bush is doing the right thing in getting more personally involved and outlining his vision for making political progress in the Middle East," Biden said.

Another Democrat, Rep. Anthony D. Weiner of New York, called Powell's visit "a bow to the bombers." He said: "Sending Secretary Powell is a retreat from the principle that violence should not be rewarded."

Senior administration officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Bush decided Wednesday that last week's suicide bombings coupled with Israel's strong military response compelled him to restate his views on the region and add a couple of new wrinkles. He still backs Israel's right to defend itself, but now views the incursions as counterproductive, officials said

Cougarettes ready to take a rest

By Elizabeth Gilbert
gilbert@newsroom.byu.edu
NewsNet Staff Writer

As the National Collegiate Dance Championship gets under way this week, the reigning champions, the Cougarettes, won't be there to defend its title.

For the first time in six years, the Cougarettes will not be heading to Daytona Beach, Fla., to set the standard for the competition at nationals.

The Cougarettes, who have taken the title four of the past six years, are ready for a rest.

"It will be hard to watch the competition and know that we don't have a team competing, but I think we're all breathing a sigh of relief. We've had a full plate this year," said Jodi Maxfield, the Cougarette's artistic director.

Earlier this year, the Cougarettes were faced with a very tough decision: nationals or the Olympics.

"If we had to get a dance ready for nationals, we wouldn't be able to do the Olympics. There was no way we could do both," said Cougarette Linda Richards, 20, a freshman from Provo who has not yet declared a major.

Richards said it takes a lot of time and energy to prepare a national team — time and energy the team decided would be better spent on a rare opportunity like performing for the Olympics.

The Olympics, however, are not the only reason the Cougarettes chose to skip nationals.

"We almost feel like it's been BYU overkill the past few years," Maxfield said. "You get the sense that people are tired of seeing us win."

Even so, the directors of the competition have called her several times asking the team to reconsider their decision not to return, Maxfield said.

"The directors want us there, but have told us that we've made a lot of teams really happy by not showing up," she said.

Adrienne Faith, a former member of the University of Colorado dance team, said it will be a nice break for the other teams at the competition.

"It's one of those things where you realize that when BYU's team is there, you're really just competing for second place. First place is already taken," Faith said.

Maxfield said she realizes the Cougarettes' decision will give other teams a chance to win, but said their decision was not made because they feel sorry for other teams.

"Don't get me wrong. We don't feel like we owe anyone anything. We just feel like this would be a good year, if any, to take a break," she said.

The next issue is what the Cougarettes will be doing while the rest of the teams are competing.

Richards said she'll be relaxing at home with her feet kicked up and her eyes carefully glued to the television broadcast of the competition. She'll be waiting to see who will take her team's place as the reigning national champions.

Maxfield said she believes this will be just a brief moment of relaxation for the Cougarettes.

"We'll be back next year. It's already on the calendar," said Maxfield, without hesitation.

The Cougarettes perform Feb. 8 in the SLOC production of "Gulls" on Main Street in Park City. The dance group is sitting out this year's national competition.

Man charged with murder of police chief

SALT LAKE CITY — The man accused of killing Roosevelt's police chief was bound over for trial Thursday.

Lee Roy Wood, 35, is charged with capital murder, three first-degree felony counts of aggravated attempted murder and a second-degree felony count of purchasing or possessing a weapon in connection with the slaying of Police Chief Cecil Gurr, 50.

Wood's preliminary hearing was held in Vernal Thursday before 8th District Judge A. Lynn Payne. The courthouse was under heavy security.

Wood could face the death penalty.

Prosecutors alleged Wood shot Gurr in the head with an assault rifle July 6, 2001, when the off-duty police chief responded to a domestic dispute at a convenience store in Ballard, just outside the county line and the chief's jurisdiction.

Ballard is about 100 miles southeast of Salt Lake City.

Money for suicide bomber families upped

NABLUS, West Bank — Saddam Hussein has increased money for the relatives of suicide bombers from $10,000 to $25,000, drawing sharp criticism from Washington. But Palestinians say the bombers are driven by a priceless thirst for revenge, religious zeal and dreams of glory — not greed.

Since Iraq upped its payments last month, 12 suicide bombers have successfully struck inside Israel, including one man who killed 25 Israelis, many of them elderly, as they sat down to a meal at a hotel to celebrate the Jewish holiday of Passover. The families of three suicide bombers said they have recently received payments of $25,000.

"They're not martyrs," President Bush said Thursday at the White House. "They're murderers and they undermine the cause of the Palestinian people. Those governments like Iraq that reward parents for the sacrifice of their children are guilty of soliciting murder of the worst kind."

Turkey will aid in war against opium

ANKARA, Turkey — Afghanistan's interim prime minister welcomed Turkey's plans to take over command of the international peacekeeping force and said Thursday the two countries would also cooperate in the fight against the production of opium.

Karzai arrived in Turkey as his government pledged to end the cultivation of poppies, a major source of income in Afghanistan and a huge problem for Turkey, through which much of the opium is smuggled.

"We asked the government of Turkey to cooperate with Afghanistan in the continuation of its fight against poppy cultivation and the smuggling and trading of it," Karzai said at news conference with Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit.

Ecevit said Turkey, which implemented measures to halt poppy cultivation under U.S. pressure in the 1970s, would share its experience.

SLOC donates excess goods to charity

SALT LAKE CITY — The Salt Lake Organizing Committee is donating $4 million worth of appliances, fixtures, furniture and other items from the Winter Olympics to Utah charities.

Committee officials launched the giveaway Wednesday at a Salt Lake senior housing complex, where they delivered beds and kitchen appliances to low-income residents.

The items came from a warehouse full of new and barely used Olympic leftovers.

Among the items are 140,000 pieces of linen, 1,230 beds, 700 washers and dryers and 811 microwaves from the Olympic Village and other venues. All came from Olympic sponsors, said chief operating officer Fraser Bullock.

He said the committee had expected to sell the items, but it's now clear the organization will close its books in the black and can afford the charitable gesture. The Utah Non-Profit Housing Corp. will oversee the distribution, in cooperation with Salt Lake Community Action and Eagle Ranch Ministries.

Police find trailer with stolen goods

By Spencer Parkinson and Sarah Shepherd

> "Right now we have discovered about 20 victims of the theft, but we believe that there could possibly be three times as many."
> —Stan Eggen, Utah County Major Crimes Task Force

Utah County officers located a stolen motor home in Coalville, Summit Co., early Wednesday morning, ending a six-month investigation into theft and forgeries.

Inside the motor home, officers located three suspects, a sawed-off shotgun and numerous items of stolen property, including TVs, VCRs, golf clubs, and computer equipment. Officers also located methamphetamine, heroin and cocaine.

"We got a lead Tuesday night that the motor home was leaving from Wyoming and heading toward Coalville," said Lt. Stan Eggen with the Utah County Major Crimes Task Force. "We sent a team up to Coalville and they found the motor home parked outside of a motel."

Officers estimate $200,000 worth of merchandise was stolen through the use of false IDs, checks and credit cards. The items detectives recovered from the motor home represent only a small portion of what was actually stolen, Eggen said.

"They might have sold the other items or they might have the merchandise stashed away in a storage unit somewhere," Eggen said.

Officers found evidence of check forgeries, check counterfeiting and identity theft, and found nearly 300 related check cases wherein checks were stolen in home burglaries, vehicle burglaries and storage shed burglaries, Eggen said.

"We found evidence of the thefts spreading from St. George to Evanston, Wyo.," Eggen said. "Right now we have discovered about 20 victims of the theft, but we believe that there could possibly be three times as many."

The suspects broke into homes, cars and storage sheds in orders to steal personal identifying documents, Eggen said. The documents were then used to make fake checks and false identification cards. The fake checks and IDs were used to purchase merchandise at various stores.

"Many of the thefts occurred from storage sheds," Eggen said. "People often store identifying documents and old checkbooks in their sheds, but they don't check their storage sheds very often. Many of the victims probably didn't realize their documents and identities had been stolen."

In order to avoid becoming a victim of identity theft, people should shred their documents or store them in a safe location, Eggen said.

The three suspects, Richard Gubler, Cheryl Sanchez and Kristal Hebner, were arrested and are being held in the Utah County Jail. Officers will seek charges from the U.S. Attorney for possession of the firearm and felony charges will be pressed for the thefts, drug possessions and forgeries.

Beck said men often do not recognize when friends or associates are exhibiting the behavior patterns of a sexual deviant.

University Police offers a Safe-Walk program designed to assist students, faculty, staff and visitors by providing walking escort services from one campus location to another seven days a week. Dispatch Supervisor Cheri Rodas said the police provide an average of six escorts a night.

Kimball Maw, 21, a senior from Visalia, Calif., majoring in American studies and film, has used her ward's safe-walk programs in the past. She said she most often uses it if she is walking home late at night when there are fewer people around.

"I don't feel stupid that I sometimes need to ask someone to walk me home," Maw said. "But I'm not going to risk my safety because there are abominable and despicable people."

All members of the community are invited to St. Mary's church, at 50 W. 200 North, where the event will begin.

Utah Valley mayors declare April Sexual Assault Awareness Month

By Sarah Shepherd and Spencer Parkinson
spencer@newsroom.byu.edu
NewsNet Staff Writers

Mayors throughout Utah Valley signed a proclamation this week officially declaring the month of April as Sexual Assault Awareness Month.

The rape crisis program of the Center for Women and Children in Crisis sent the proclamation to each community to raise awareness among civic leaders and residents of the issues involved with sexual assault.

"All of the mayors from the various cities were very willing to take an active part in signing the proclamation," said Patricia Mills, rape crisis coordinator for the Center for Women and Children in Crisis. "I am very happy with the mayors' actions and with the community's willingness to participate."

Mills said in the past, sexual assault hasn't been a commonly addressed topic in Utah County because many believe that it is not a large problem.

"We are trying to raise awareness about sexual assault and rape," Mills said. "It can happen to anyone in any community."

According to the Center for Women and Children in Crisis Web site, Utah is now the 14th highest state for rape crime in the nation. Utah has more rapes per capita than California, New York, and Washington.

Also, the Web site indicated 1.3 rapes occur per minute in the United States, or 683,000 a year. Since they estimate only 16 percent of all rapes are reported to law enforcement, the actual number of rapes per year could be as high as 4.3 million.

"This statistic is very high and that is alarming," said Sandra Adams, who works with the Utah Coalition Against Sexual Assault. "We feel it is far too many. Utahns should be alarmed."

People often do not report rape and sexual assault because of fear, shame and embarrassment, Adams said. Victims do not know what will happen to them and are unaware of what they should do.

As part of Sexual Assault Awareness Month, various organizations have planned activities throughout the state.

This evening, a special event called Take Back the Night will be hosted by VOICE, a BYU club. The event will be an evening of observance for victims of rape and their families.

On April 26, the Utah Coalition Against Sexual Assault will be holding a statewide candlelight vigil at the Utah Capitol as part of a nationwide observance.

"All we are trying to do is raise awareness so men, women and children will think about their safety and about what is going on in their community," Adams said.

Mideastern students fight misconceptions

By Joli Williams

In a student panel Thursday, six Middle Eastern BYU students hosted a question and answer session to correct misconceptions about Islam and violence.

Answering over two dozen questions, the panel said the Arab and Muslim people are portrayed as bloodthirsty terrorists when in fact their lives are based upon a religion of peace and obedience.

"Our goal is to change the message of violence students have received about the Middle East and Muslim religion," said Shadi Qawasmi, 19, sophomore from the West Bank majoring in communications.

The panel included only BYU students in an effort to connect the foreign issue to campus life.

All six panelists agreed the biggest misconception among Americans is the idea that all Middle Eastern people are terrorists.

"Unfortunately we all have biases," said Laila Lamani, 20, a junior from Morocco majoring in computer science. "Before I came to the U.S., I thought all Americans were like the actors on the Bold and the Beautiful."

Lamani said the only way to change misconceptions is to learn about the different cultures to and ask intelligent questions.

Still, most Middle Eastern students are frustrated that the correct message is not getting to the American people.

One student said it is hard to learn both sides of the story when the media does not equally report all issues.

"Jewish blood is more highly regarded than Palestinian blood by the media," said Firas Qawasmi, 23, senior from the West Bank majoring in accounting. "I think this is wrong. A life is a life."

Many students had questions about the Muslim people and culture since the Sept. 11 attacks, said Joshua Bird, 21, freshman from Quincy, Wash., majoring in business finance.

Skydiving: The summer thrill

By Lani Dame
lani@newsroom.byu.edu
NewsNet Staff Writer

The end of the semester is a time to relax and relieve stress.

So go skydiving.

"Everyone wants an end of the semester road trip and what better way to do it than to go skydiving," said Jana Pope, 20, junior from Austin, Texas, majoring in international studies.

A group of BYU students will travel to Skydive Ranch in Calgary, Canada to skydive from up to 11,000 feet.

Pope and Leszek Stachyra, 32, a junior from Poland majoring in geographic information systems, went skydiving together last year at Skydive Ranch and enjoyed the experience so much they invited friends to go with them this semester.

Since many people had an interest in attending, Pope and Stachyra decided it would be safer to charter a bus than to have multiple cars driving, Pope said.

"We didn't really plan on doing the bus with so many people," Stachyra said. "We just wanted to go with a small group of friends but it just grew into such a big interest that the only way to make it safe and organized was to get a bus."

Because of the great response from people, two trips have been organized. One trip is April 25 to 28 and the second April 28 to May 1. While the first bus is full, the second still has a few spots left, Pope said.

Skydiving has gotten such a great response because it is an uncommon and fun activity.

"It's something different to do," said Shaylona Kirk, 19, sophomore from Chandler, Ariz., majoring in zoology. "It's something to look forward to. I'm going to school during spring so it's like my summer vacation all in three days."

Shawn South, a BYU graduate, said his first time skydiving was phenomenal and he cannot wait to go again.

Pope said the adrenaline rush also draws people to skydiving.

"You just climb out on the wing of an airplane and you're holding onto the wing strut and you feel like some James Bond stunt double," South said.

While some may have fears of skydiving, Stachyra said once people try skydiving, they realize how safe it is.

Before their first jump, students are trained for about six hours. All equipment is thoroughly checked by employees, Stachyra said.

Going to Canada and skydiving is not as costly as some would believe.

Pope said since they know the owner of the ranch the group has received a special group rate and the ranch, usually only open on Saturday and Sunday, will be open for them.

"A lot of them have always wanted to do something like this, but because of prices here on the market they've hesitated," Stachyra said. "But with us they get an awesome road trip hanging out with LDS kids and skydiving."

Pope said if the first-timers are anything like she and Stachyra were, they will be hooked and continue skydiving.

Stachyra and Pope plan on going on additional trips after each semester.

"Whenever there's good weather and we have a break we'd like to try and do it," Pope said.

Summer weather has capris back on campus

Women attending BYU can continue to dress modestly and fashionably as capri pants stay popular and trendy for at least another season.

Capri pants originally became popular in the 1950s, when the wealthy and elite visited the isle of Capri, an island off the coast of Italy.

Italian fashion was flourishing in a post-WWII era and the pants were at the height of it.

In recent years, the pants have made a comeback and are more popular and versatile than before.

This trend can be seen all over BYU campus.

"Capri pants are popular because the knee length shorts aren't as young and trendy looking," said Jan Rand, buyer for the Women's Department at the BYU Bookstore.

Rand said the capri trend hit campus a little more than two years ago in the fall of 1999.

Since than, the pants seem to be everywhere on campus.

Chandi Taylor, 19, a freshman from Boise, Idaho, majoring in elementary education, said she really likes the capri pants and their style.

"I love to wear them because they are comfortable and allow girls to show a little leg without being immodest," she said.

Taylor said she thinks the style is perfect for BYU women.

"The shorts that are sold at stores are always up to the thigh. I don't feel comfortable wearing things like that so the capris are a modest way to be fashionable," she said.

Men often like the look of the pants on women.

"I think girls that dress modest and are still up on the fashions are really attractive," said Logan Gregory, 22, a sophomore from Spokane, Wash., majoring in accounting.

The pants seem to look good on most girls, Gregory said.

"I would rather see a girls' ankles than her whole leg. It's more classy," he said.

While the pants are popular on campus, they are not the best selling item at the Bookstore.

"In the past, skirts have outsold the pants and they still continue to do so," Rand said.

However, Rand said the pants are still popular because they are trendy.

"Unfortunately, sometimes trends win over the Honor Code. Capri pants are popular because the trend follows the Honor Code," Rand said.

Capris are sold in almost every store that stocks women's clothing, including Dillard's in the Prove Towne Centre.

Jennifer Davis, a Dillard's employee in the women's department, said capris were big last season and will be big this season.

"I would say they are one of our best sellers. They are really popular right now," she said.

Davis said they are popular because they are longer than shorts but are still cool and fun.

They are also very versatile in their fabrics and can be worn with a variety of tops and shoes.

However, there are some people who do not like them.

Heidi Stigger, 22, a junior from Baltimore, Md., majoring in biology said she does not like the pants because they are not pants and they are not shorts.

"I think the pants really only look good on people who are tall and thin and look like models," she said.

While not everyone may like the pants, one thing is certain: capris will be around BYU for at least another year.

"I would rather see a girls' ankles than her whole leg. It's more classy."

Travel deals make trips affordable for students

By Julie Angevine
jna9@email.byu.edu
NewsNet Staff Writer

When the "travel bug" hits, some students head to exotic destinations during the summer months. Europe is often a hotspot, mostly for economic reasons.

European countries cater to students by offering several cheap travel options.

Accommodations at youth hostels are inexpensive, student discount cards save on sight-seeing entrance fees and the Eurail pass allow travelers to save on train fares, touring several different countries in a short amount of time.

Michelle Clark, 26, MBA student from Salt Lake City, bought a Eurail pass and backpacked with two friends around six European countries in May 1999.

"Because of the Eurail pass we were able to get prices on the trains that we wouldn't have been able to get," Clark said.

Clark said she chose to backpack instead of traveling with a tour group because it allowed greater flexibility in her travel plans, she said.

"That was what I was looking for," Clark said. "For me it was ideal."

Greg Abbott, travel adviser, for STA Travel in Provo, said during spring and summer business increases substantially.

"Right now is our peak season and we're booking 20 to 30 passengers a day to Europe," Abbott said.

STA Travel is one of many travel agencies that offer travel options for students, such as complete group tour packages, hotel and flight accommodations, and Eurail passes.

Eurail offers several package options, with three different price ranges for youths under the age of 26, adults and group rates.

Passes vary greatly, allowing up to three months of consecutive travel, down to as little as five days travel within a two-month period.

There is flexibility depending on each traveler's vacation needs, Abbott said.

Another BYU student, Jodi Morrison, 28, cond year MBA Graduate student from Salt Lake City, backpacked around eight European countries in August 2000.

"Europe is very American friendly. You can get around speaking English just fine," Morrison said.

Backpacking Europe is something Morrisonwanted to do simply because she had never been to Europe before.

In order to afford the trip she traveled with a friend instead of a tour group, stayed in youth hostels and bought a Eurail pass that allowed her ten passes within two months.

"You can plan your own schedule, see what you want to see, rest when you want to, go at your own pace and get things for cheaper," Morrison said.

The Eurail pass is designed to make European travel affordable and the lowest prices are for people under 26, specifically targeting the needs of college students.

Morrison estimated her trip cost $1,500 for one month of travel, which included airfare, food, hotel accommodations, Eurailpass, gifts and souvenirs.

An early Cougar lead combined with solid pitching gave BYU its first home win of the season, over Utah Thursday night.

The Cougars, who are tied for first with San Diego State in the Mountain West Conference, beat the No. 3 Utes 5-2.

Sophomore starter Jeff Mousser, who improved his record to 5-2, pitched 8.1 innings, allowing 2 runs on eight hits.

"I felt the best I felt all year," Mousser said. "I had a good sharp breaking ball tonight and it kept them off balance."

In front of 2,251 fans at Larry H. Miller Field, the Cougars scored their first run in the first inning.

Lead off hitter Doug Jackson scored off a sacrifice fly by sophomore first baseman Dave Jensen.

Junior right fielder Matt Carson also scored off sophomore third baseman Rob Itri's double, giving the Cougars a 2-0 lead.

Senior catcher Lars Birkeland, who batted 3-3 with two runs, scored when Jackson had a base hit in the second.

"I've been working on my hitting lately," Birkeland said. "Practice is paying off for me."

Freshman centerfielder Ryan Chambers extended the Cougar lead to 4-0 in the fourth when sophomore shortstop Ranger Wiens hit a sacrifi

Birkeland scored the team's fifth and fi a fielding error by senior Ute second Adam Castleton.

Head coach Vance Law said the team simply wait for someone to hit home ru Cougars to score.

"I don't think you can sit back and hop runs," he said. "It was important for us t and it was real big for us to get on the boa

With eight hits on the game, Law said reminded him of his days in the major lea

Y track and field ready to sprint home against Utah teams

By Othello Richards Jr. and Jay Dresser
othello@newsroom.byu.edu
NewsNet Sports Writers

Four months and 13 cities into their indoor and outdoor seasons, members of BYU's track teams will finally compete at home.

Scheduled to roll into Provo on Saturday are numerous Utah schools — Utah State University, University of Utah, Southern Utah University, Utah Valley State College and Weber State.

According to women's Head Coach Craig Poole, because of safety concerns during the indoor season that ended a month ago, the track teams are unable to compete in the Smith Fieldhouse where they practice.

Pool said meets used to be held there more than ten years ago, but so many spectators came to watch the events that the crowded Fieldhouse posed a danger to the athletes.

"People were stepping onto the track to watch. It was a mess," Poole said.

Because of the hazard, BYU stopped hosting track meets in the SFH and resigned itself to traveling — every week.

According to Poole, since the weather in Provo doesn't start to warm up until April, the Cougars host only two track meets during the outdoor season. For all other weeks until June the team will be on the road.

So just how are the athletes reacting to their rare opportunity to compete at BYU?

Sophomore middle-distance runner Lisa Price is excited to be off the road for a week.

"Traveling really does make you tired," she said. "Here, you get to sleep in your own bed. You get to eat what you want for breakfast."

Having a meet at BYU will also give the athletes an opportunity to have their family and friends watch them compete, some for the first time.

Pole vaulter Bethanie Evans said half of her BYU ward and her local family members will be in attendance.

"I think that it will be an awesome experience since I'm a freshman. It'll be nice to compete on the field we practice on," Evans said.

The men's team will be shorthanded as 15 of its top athletes will be competing in the 75th annual Texas Relays.

"The Texas Relays is probably the biggest meet of the year," men's Head Coach Mark Robison said. "Most of the meet consists of relays and our goal is to qualify for nationals in the 4x400-meter relay."

The pole vault competition in Texas, which will feature national champion and BYU senior Jeff Hansen, will also be a main attraction.

"There is a good chance six of the top eight pole vaulters in the nation will be there," Robison said.

The men's team enters the competitions this weekend ranked 22nd in the nation, according to Trackwire. Robison said he thinks the ranking is inconsistent with the team's talent.

"We think we can be top ten," Robison said. "If we can get continual improvement over the remainder of the season, we are going to be very good."

At the Cougars' first home meet, field events will begin at 10 a.m. and running events at 1 p.m. Admission is free.

of A are a lot like us. It's going to come down to who gets on a roll and hits," he said.

The key to the Cougars' success will be consistency and unity, said senior Jeni Lopez.

"Our focus has been hitting as a team, and just not hitting personally," Lopez said. "We know we can do it. We just need to have the confidence."

The team will count on senior Kelly Evanson to lead the team once again. The two-time All-American finished the season ranked No. 11 in the all-around.

Lopez will also need to do well and continue to be the leader she has been all season for the women.

"Jeni's been consistent throughout her entire career," Cattermole said. "Kelly's just a seasoned senior and a great competitor."

Also competing in the all-around, sophomore Kari Dye and freshman Jaime Mabray will need to be steady. Dye has come on strong in the last half of the season. She tied school records with a 9.975 on floor and beam in the last two meets.

BYU will need to regroup following a tough regular season loss at Utah two weeks ago. The Cougars suffered several injuries in the regular season finale.

Junior co-captain Candace Cosgrave severely sprained her ankle during her floor exercise against the Utes. She will not compete Saturday, but could be ready for nationals.

Junior Brooke Craig should be back in action this weekend. She is nursing a light concussion suffered during a bars mishap in warm ups against Utah, but Cattermole said he is confident she will be ready to go.

He also said Megan Shupe, who injured her ankle on a vault, will be ready.

In a field of good teams, it will come down to who keeps focus and blocks out the pressure.

"If you keep your mind about you, that's the team that's going to make it," Cattermole said. "If you don't, you go home."

The Skyhawks (3-5) have lost their three senior captains and the team's starting defense from last season and are looking toward their midfielders, captain sophomore Dave Lazzarro and sophomore Jack Watson to provide stability on both sides.

"They've always been a team that's scrapped a lot," sophomore attack Pete Stevenson said. "They'll come out and play hard."

The Cougars are No. 1 in the Rocky Mountain League, but with the National Championships on April 26 and 27, they know that anything can happen.

"We beat everybody, but that doesn't mean we'll win," Stevenson said. "Colorado State will probably be our biggest challenge."

Even though the Cougars won their last meeting with the Rams, they know the Rams will fight even harder in the league championship.

"I'm sure they'll go in and fix the things they did wrong in their game against us, and we'll study our game film on what we can do against them," Stevenson said.

Protect Yourself! Investigate Before You Invest!

For your own protection closely examine any offers which promise or guarantee large amounts of income/money. (old saying: 'If it's too good to be true' then it most likely is')!

Consider it a warning sign if you must buy something in order to start the program, or if you have to pay up front for the information. Please request information regarding the fee on every interview. Readers should be aware of scams, especially when requiring payment up front.

Work at home ads usually require money up front to receive the books to contact the companies for work-at-home ideas. The Better Business Bureau said that the companies they have researched, for work at home, (stuffing envelopes, or making $1000 - $5000 /month), are NOT credible and you will usually lose money.

Be very careful NOT to give out any bank or Credit Card information unless you know the company well, or have checked them out thoroughly.

For a reliability report on a specific company, check first with your local Better Business Bureau. You will need the company's phone #.

BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU 1-800-456-3907 or www.utah.bbb.org

(If there are any problems with a company that is advertised, please call the Daily Universe at 422-4523, ask for Nadine, so it can be checked out).

Some times information you will pay for can be found in your local libraries for FREE.

 PLEASE BE CAREFUL **
